Don't Blame Profits

A short time ago survey was made of the way families are attempting to meet current living costs. A heavy majority reported that they were buying only necessities, doing without things, and trying to make food and clothing go farther. They also reported, generally speaking, that it was necessary to spend a higher proportion of their income for food.

This is the inevitable consequence of an inflation which has not yet spent its course. Some groups have managed to increase their earnings sufficiently to offset price increases. Some have bettered their positions. Millions of people, on the other hand, have been forced to steadily reduce their purchasing, and there is no relief in sight.

It is easy and perhaps natural to blame business for creating this problem. From various quarters, we hear ominous talk of the size of industrial profits. Retail stores have been picketed by people with angry banners protesting the going prices of food, clothing and just about everything else. Natural or not, this attitude is based on serious misconceptions. For the truth is that the net profits of industry, the money which can be retained by the owners of the tools—millions of investors who have put their savings in industry—are one of the smallest items in the cost of doing business. And surveys of retail trade, including both the chains and the independents, show that most stores earn a profit of only one to five or six cents, according to type of goods sold, out of each dollar they take in. Certainly, there is no margin there that will permit price cutting.

Business of all kinds is as worried about high prices as any consumer. It knows that mass production and mass distribution cannot survive if people cannot afford to buy. Prices have gone up in spite of its effort to hold them down.

HERALD MAIL BOX

This column is for Herald readers to express their views on questions of the day. They are not necessarily the opinions of this paper.

Believing that the Herald is a valuable outlet for living letters and that our readers are glad to offer a series of discussions on the foregoing by a lay reader.

The fifth Commandment: Thou shalt not kill. These words do not only the taking of human life, but also the taking of passions that lead to it, and also scandal, which is spiritual murder.

The killing of the lower animals for food, clothing, etc., is lawful, since the creatures are made for man's use (Gen. 9:3); but wanton cruelty towards them is sinful.

We are commanded by the fifth Commandment to live in peace and union with our neighbor, to respect his rights, to seek his spiritual and bodily welfare, and to take proper care of our own life and health.

We are bound to take proper care of our own life and health because these are gifts from God and are important for the salvation of the soul.

We are to take proper care of our life and health by means of exercise, cleanliness, temperance, and regularity and by the use of remedies when we are sick.

One can sin against the duty of caring for his life and health by willfully injuring his health, or by rashly taking or destroying his life. The fifth Commandment forbids all willful murder, fighting, anger, hatred, revenge, and bad words. All willful murder is forbidden because it is the taking of a human life, and it is the taking of a human life, and it is the taking of a human life.

Odd Fellow Lodge Plan Social Gatherings For Their Membership

That corn meal, which is now being produced in Belle Glade and South Bay, looks rich enough to put fat on humans as well as cattle. The ground raw materials will be largely sold direct to the big feed manufacturers in Miami, Jacksonville and Tampa.

The Florida Democratic delegation in Philadelphia were housed at the Robert Monahan hotel, one of the best and small.

This hotel is named after the father of the Order of Eastern Star, and he was also a leading Methodist layman of his day. This hotel is now owned by the Methodist church which houses its publishing house and sales business in a portion of the building. Delegate Ruth Wedgworth was very much impressed with what she was able to see of Philadelphia. Independence Square was of special attraction to her.

The Sinclair-Kirkman Company to show its interest in the educational, athletic program, provided a handsome trophy cup, which will be awarded to the custody of the ball team which wins the championship. Space is provided for the engraving of the names of the clubs awarded the championship honor for the present and future seasons. Watch the teams battle for this award.

With the construction of three large bulk station plants on the Terminal section it is to be dubbed "Garden of Eden." Resourse Braddock's former cattle pasture is really becoming an industrial center of importance. The development is a substantial one, an opinion expressed years ago by the Senior Braddock, that some day the land in this special territory would be the most important money making center of the South.

South Bay citizens, looking forward to the providing of proper entertainment for youth and adults, feel the need of a new site and building for a modern recreation center hall and committee workers busy on the task of figuring out ways and means of securing same. The Overseer is planning a bet that they will get it, too.

Don't wear low necked shirts or dresses to the evening ball games, for the bags are pretty bad and do give quite a bit of annoyance. Several patrons were thoughtful enough to bring along spray guns. Wear anything but white, for that color is a bad attractor. In the last hours of the games a light coat does not come amiss to keep out cold and drafts.

Mrs. Ruth Wedgworth was very proud in Philadelphia to display her Lion club membership card, an honor that few women possess.

Reports are coming in from all over the nation to the effect that thousands of our youth are dropping out of school to become recruits to the national services. This way they get a short-cut than if they wait till October and the draft system is effective. In the larger cities boys lines of 19-20 year old men are found before the recruiting stations.

Words are growing fast on agricultural lands and when they are brown down and plowed under, considerable fertilizer material will be added to the valuable potting soil.

Farm implement dealer did their best to get equipment into the Glades for the peach corn harvesting period but were only partially successful as twice as many machines could have been utilized had they been available. This shortage will likely be overcome before the fall season. The two type machines, Ideal and Case, have given satisfactory services.

Canoe Creek In Ocoola Cleared Of Gas Fish

Canoe Creek in Ocoola county, which is a dug canal between two large lakes, for years has been one of the favorite fishing grounds in that section. Some three years ago a range owner did a lot of digging and damming on his place, which practically destroyed the creek for fishing. This condition has been remedied by the state, so that the stream can again become a popular fishing spot. Tom Lanier and Arthur Partin, game wardens, recently cleared the creek for predatory fish and got 1200 pounds of gar, mud fish and catfish. 251 bass, 30 bream and 167 pounds of catfish.

and cause of Williams' death was apparent, but if called, it will be only to close up Williams' prison dossier. Mrs. Krumsiege stated to law officers that on Sunday night her family had been into Belle Glade to attend church and had returned home and being in a hurry to hear the 11 o'clock news broadcast, had not stopped to take her purse and other articles from the car, and left the keys in the car. That soon after she reached her room, she heard the roar of the car starting and it was driven to the north end of the island where the thieves found no passage way out.

The Krumsiege family erected a barricade across the roadway to prevent the car from making its way southward again and armed, guarded the barricade till morning.

With a Lee farm truck and man assistance, Mrs. Krumsiege made a trip to the head of the island and there she found her car abandoned.

It was this clue that led the prison officials to believe that some of the escaped prisoners were hiding on the island and they set up their search accordingly.

Mrs. Krumsiege's purse, containing over $100, was missing from the car when she recovered.
